Geographical Boundaries	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Size of the zone is too large. 	The zone is drawn to land parcels, these parcels of land can be bigger in rural areas than in urban areas so can look large. The zone is based on midpoints between schools, which considers catchments areas for each school.
TEZ should match ES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Concern the TEZ does not match the ES home zone 	The alignment with the TEZ was considered, the ES home zone is designed primarily to manage school capacity. The TEZ serves a different purpose which is transport eligibility to a student’s closest school based on transport policy. Where two neighbouring schools have enrolment schemes the ES zone was kept as consulted on as; <ol style="list-style-type: none"> If a student is in a school’s ES home zone but outside their TEZ, will get transport as it is the student’s closest school they can enrol at. If a student is outside of a school’s ES home zone but in its TEZ, will get transport if accepted as an out of zone student. Where one school had an ES and one did not have an ES, the home zone was changed to align the zone to the midpoint between the schools as transport would default to the TEZ.
Historical and generational ties	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Concern that changes could affect future students 	If the school has out of zone places, it can advertise for enrolments outside of its home zone. Siblings of current students are top of the priority list for out of zone students if the school does not have a special programme.

Community connections

- Wyndham School is seen as central part of the community, and the zone should reflect this

The Ministry appreciates the role of the school in the community, however zoning decisions must also consider the individual school capacity, demographic trends and the capacity across the network of schools in the area.
